

ENGLISH STRIKE MAY LOCK OUT HALF MILLION

Railway Employees Demand Shorter Hours and More Pay.

Vote of the Men Taken Today—Decision in Two Weeks.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—About nine in ten members of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants are voting for a strike on every line in England. The ballot's result will not be announced until October 25, but the men's decision for warfare is a foregone conclusion. The walkout will be up practically every mile of track on the island, and its effect, with the complete prostration of commerce, will be felt throughout the world.

The men demand:
Employees' Demand.
Eight-hour day for all employees concerned in the movement of trains.
Ten-hour day for all others except plate layers.

One and one-fourth pay for overtime. No employee to be summoned to work with less than nine hours rest.

One and one-half pay from midnight Saturday to midnight Sunday.

Two shillings' wage increase to all who do not receive eight-hour day.

Three shillings' weekly above country wages to all London employees.

Affect Half Million.

Union recognition.

Though the Amalgamated Society's membership is only 97,000, it will be able to include all of the 500,000 English railroad men in the strike. Secretary Richard Bell, of the society, labor member of parliament for Derby is the movement's active leader.

The union's fighting fund amounts to more than $1,000,000, and it is estimated that strike benefits can be paid for eight weeks unless there should be a heavy fall in railroad receipts, of which the society has nearly $200,000 invested. Other unions may support the strike financially, however, in which case the conflict may be indefinitely prolonged.

Railroad officials say union recognition would run the risk of that compliance with the demands for higher pay and shorter hours would wipe out all profits on many lines.

Public opinion generally favors arbitration, the impression being that the union is entitled to recognition, but that it should compromise its other demands.

POLITICS RUIN TO RAILROADS OF NATION

Public demand for lower rates, but that the politicians of the several States had used the issue to gain public support. Better service, much more than lower rates, he believed, was what the traveling public really desired.

The political demand for reduced passenger fares has obtained a certain measure of popular support. It is inevitable that this should be true, for it is natural that every man should desire to get the most for his money when he is buying a passenger ticket, the same as when he is buying a suit of clothes or anything else.

Political Agitation.

"Public support has also been won by the persistent political agitation of this subject. Just as a nervous man may be convinced that he is seriously ill, so a certain element of the public has been convinced by this political agitation that the railroad industry is unreasonably high passenger fares.

The extent of the popular support given to this political agitation, however, has been greatly exaggerated.

He also referred to the inability of the roads to market their securities satisfactorily in view of the present agitation, showing that, while demands for lower rates and better service were being made, the roads could not get investors to provide for the necessary extensions and improvements.

Government Control.

On the subject of Government control of railroads he said:

"The railroads are properly the subject of Governmental regulation, but this regulation must be based on sound economic and business principles. Regulation for property carried so far as is necessary for the protection of the buyer of transportation and the public generally from wrong. Any attempt to carry it beyond this limit brings it into conflict with the Constitution of the United States, which has thrown about the railroads of the country the same degree of protection that is assured to property in all other forms, and into conflict with those economic laws which are as unchangeable and constant in their operation as is the law of gravitation.

The address of welcome to the delegates was made by Commissioner Henry L. West, who announced himself as not one of those who had a horror of railroads, as he referred to "dear, dead days" when, as a newspaper correspondent in Washington, he had been the recipient of many favors in the form of trips from the members of the association, and promised in return to see that no one got into trouble while in the city, if he, as having jurisdiction over the police department, could prevent it.

POPE PIUS BLESSES EUCHARISTIC LEAGUE

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 15.—The Rt. Rev. Camillus Paul Maes, bishop of Covington, Ky., bearing the apostolic benediction from Pope Pius to the Congress of Eucharistic Leagues, arrived here today from Rome. He comes to the congress as the special representative of the pope. He is his president and director.

Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, arrived last night, and celebrated pontifical mass this morning at the opening of the Eucharistic Congress. More than one hundred priests and dignitaries were in the procession to the cathedral school.

PRESIDENT'S FRIEND DEAD.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 15.—William G. Wilmer, an intimate friend of the President, and for nearly thirty years a lawyer in this city, died at his country place, "Plain Dealing," Va. He was a son of the Rev. Joseph Wilmer, formerly bishop of Louisiana.

PACKERS BATTLE WITH GOVERNMENT IN EXPORT CASE

President Roosevelt's Policies Threshed Before U. S. Supreme Court.

Roosevelt's railroad policies came squarely before the Supreme Court of the United States today, when briefs were submitted on the petition to grant writs of certiorari, whereby the four big packing concerns of the West hope to evade payment of the $12,000,000 fines for accepting "concessions" from railroad companies for meat or export.

The Department of Justice is fighting the case on behalf of the Government. The Solicitor General holds that if the concentration of the packers be accepted by the court, the entire field of foreign commerce will be taken out of the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the railroads will be left free to grant rebates, to give concessions, and to discriminate between shippers and localities.

The importance of the case is emphasized by the argument that the Hepburn act does not alter the unequal provisions of the Elkins act, under which the packers were convicted.

The companies were fined for accepting rebates from the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railway a lower rate on meat shipped from Kansas City, Mo., to Christiania, Norway, than the rate on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

In the application for the writs today to bring the cases from the eighth circuit.

It is a good thing to know how to select food that will so thoroughly feed and nourish the body that there is no indication of hunger or faintness from one meal to another.

Grape-Nuts will carry the user longer, probably, than any other food known. A young lady attending business college writes:

"Before I began using Grape-Nuts I got so hungry before the dinner hour that I was faint and almost sick, but since I have had Grape-Nuts for breakfast I study harder, and wait longer for my dinner without experiencing any of the former trouble."

"One of the great advantages is that it requires no cooking or preparation. I wish every one knew of the value of Grape-Nuts for children in school." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pags.

GRANDSON OF GRANT WILL BE DIPLOMAT

Algeron Sartoris, grandson of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, will be appointed secretary of legation to Montevideo, Uruguay, according to an announcement made at the State Department today.

Gustavus Munroe, Jr., of Mississippi, will get the legation secretaryship at La Paz, Bolivia.

cult of appeals to the Supreme Court, the packers claim that the Elkins law is unconstitutional, because it is said to be restricted and burden export traffic by levying a tax on articles exported from a State and because a preference is given to a port of one State over that of another by this regulation of commerce.

The department replies that by no means of construction can the Elkins act be said to levy a tax on meat exported, as Congress has passed a general law affecting all foreign commerce. It is argued that such legislation cannot discriminate between certain ports, because it may happen in a given case that one port is more available for the exportation of certain traffic than another.

side of the altar to fight the fire. After a stream of water was put on the flames it was only a few minutes before it was extinguished.

The quantity of water used in stamping out the fire did considerable damage to the flooring and ceiling of the first floor, as well as to the carpet in the auditorium.

L. L. Blou, president of the Washington Hebrew Congregation this morning said that the damage to the property would amount to more than $15,000, and that the entire loss was covered by insurance. He did not know the exact amount, but he said he knew that the building is fully insured.

Will Rebuild Immediately.

Senior Rabbi Stern and the Rev. Abram Simon, officiating at the church, hurried down to the scene as soon as news of the fire reached them this morning. After an examination of the extent of the damage, it was stated that rebuilding would immediately commence.

An effort will be made to have the church repaired so that when the Saturday and Sunday services are held, the congregation will be able to use their quarters without serious interference.

Should the fire have broken out in the front part of the church, on the Eighth street front, the magnificent organ which took six months to install, would have been irreparably damaged.

ROCKEFELLER ABSENT;
KELLOGG DISAPPOINTED

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The failure of William G. Rockefeller, treasurer of the parent company of the Oil trust, to appear today at the inquiry into the affairs of the Standard proved a severe disappointment to Frank B. Kellogg, representing the Government.

The nephew of John D. Rockefeller is quietly sojourning in his country home, and will probably remain there for several days. When he sees fit to answer the summons of Mr. Kellogg, it is expected that he will be able to explain the deal between Standard Oil loans, amounting to more than $4,000,000.

Sightseers From Two States Pleased With Washington Sights.

"Cracker" Girls Declare Washington Men Are "Awfully Cute."

Erudition from Indiana, eager curiosity and patriotism from Georgia, and a distinctive type of beauty from both places filled the corridors of the Metropolitan Hotel today and then permeated to the Avenue, to the Monument, to Arlington, and to Mt. Vernon.

Indiana has sent some of its school teachers to Washington, Georgia contributes a dozen school girls; the former are bent on acquiring knowledge and scholastic enjoyment, the latter have drunk deep enough of the Pierian Spring and have come to giggle and to have enjoyment, scholastic if necessary, but single-promoting if possible. Any way, they are here, no matter how different the point of view. The teachers find the "most instructive and educational," while the girls think "it's just too dear for anything."

The teachers live in Oakland City, Ind. The "Georgians" are from the Shorter College at Rome.

Indiana at first declined to be interviewed. When asked: "How's the author crop in Indiana?" one of the dispensers of knowledge sauntered here and there.

"The author crop does not flourish on our soil. It grows best when transplanted. We sow the seeds in our Indiana schools, but it's a Chicago or near Hoboken."

"Authors are a curious product; they are unsatisfactory; they seem to try to forget Indiana. We are going to pay more attention to corn hereafter."

"How do you like Washington men?"

"Haven't Seen Washington Men."

"I have not seen many of them. I have talked to none. They appear to be sick at the time. I mean they look sick. But perhaps it is asthetics. I like to remember years and years ago seeing a picture of the Capitol in my geography and wondering if I should ever see it, and here I am—it is a wonderful study, a mixture of Greek, Egyptian, and as the great 'celestial poet' says, 'it's'—but the Georgia girls came down the stairs and interrupted the half-interpreted conversation."

"Yes, I'm from Georgia," said the speaker, who giggled. "Are you a reporter?" O. my! Well, this town certainly is cute. I have never spoken to a reporter before. (Giggle.) I like the men here, but why they wear those white gloves? I have a friend who wears those gloves in Georgia, but she is a woman and wears them to keep her hands clean. They are the style, Oh!

"The men (giggle) are cute, too, awfully cute. There was one on the car."

Chorus of ahems from the other girls and Mr. T. J. Simons, the guide appeared.

"It is an impressive city. There is nothing we do not like about it. Do not quote me unless you wish."

The school teachers and Misses Celia Raugh, Mary Cantwell, Ada Maxon, and Mattie Patterson, while the Georgia party consists of Misses Elmer, Tuley, Fern, Howard, Davis, Moore, Nunnally, Lela, Delany, and McGhee. They are in the city for a few days, and will leave for the head of Shorter College since 1888.

"JACK" SPRECKELS ESCAPES DEATH

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 15.—Spreckels, son of John D. Spreckels, owner of the Call, grandson of Spreckels, millionaire sugar speculator and nephew of Adolph Spreckels, escaped death today after a long illness.

For nearly two hours three physicians worked over him without being able to resuscitate him. When he finally came to consciousness, Spreckels was under the constant care of trained nurses.

Inquiries at his home today elicited the fact that he was reading quietly and past danger. The accident to Spreckels was due to a defective gas apparatus for heating water in the bath room.

F. M. DIMMICK WEDS RICH WIDOW

The secret marriage of Frank M. Dimmick, of this city, to Mrs. Lucy Merrill, nee Mills, at Spencer, Mass., Saturday last, which leaked out today, while a great surprise to his parents and friends here, was not entirely unexpected, according to General Dimmick, the bridegroom's father.

General Dimmick says that his son met the bride in Chicago some months ago and had visited her upon several occasions there. The family did not expect the marriage to take place until November, but were not displeased with the romantic manner in which the young couple cast conventionality to the winds.

The bride is a wealthy widow of Chicago. She was joined by Mr. Dimmick at Rochester, N. Y., and the couple went to Monroe, Mass., to have the ceremony performed, but on arriving found the clerk's office closed. They accordingly journeyed to Spencer, where they located Clerk Kane, and after procuring the license and swearing the clerk to secrecy they were married.

General Dimmick said today that the couple, after a bridal tour, will locate at Lakewood, N. J., for the winter.
